Cities

TÁBOR

Tábor is a town in the South Bohemian Region of the Czech Republic, 90 kilometres south of the capital Prague. It lies on the river Lužnice. The town's name translates to "camp" in Czech. The town gave its name to the Taborites, a radical wing of the Hussites. The town was founded in the spring of 1420 by Petr Hromádka and Jan Bydlinký from the most radical wing of the Hussites, who soon became known as the Taborites.

The town is 437 m above sea level, the highest point is the Hýlačka observation tower and the lowest is the surface of the river. The area of the town is 62.22 km². The historical old town is situated on a hill above the river, which was used for the protection of the city. In the middle of the city lies the Jordán reservoir, which was created in 1492. It was originally used for storage of water, but nowadays it is mainly used for recreation. It is the oldest reservoir in Central Europe.

SEZIMOVO ÚSTÍ

Sezimovo Ústí is a town in the South Bohemian Region, Czech Republic. It is located approximately 95 km south of Prague, the capital of the Czech Republic, and 60 km north of České Budějovice, the capital of the South Bohemian Region.

The first mention of Sezimovo Ústí is from 1250, which means that the city was established in 13th century. Sezimovo Ústí and particularly Kozí hrádek is closely connected to the Hussites. Jan Hus, the man who inspired the Hussite movement, lived there in 1414 and preached at Kozí hrádek.

Sezimovo Ústí is divided into two parts which are very closely connected and work together as one city. The history of Sezimovo Ústí 1 goes back to medieval times, while Sezimovo Ústí 2 is much younger.
