SLOVENIANS WIN THE EUROPEAN SLOWPITCH CUP

by Bob Fromer

Pardubice, Czech Republic: August 4 -- Everyone will say that it's the best thing that could have happened for slowpitch softball in Europe -- and even some members of the British team Chromies might agree.

The long reign of British national and club teams (and, on one occasion, the Irish) at the top of European slowpitch is over. In the final of the 2012 European Slowpitch Cup on Saturday, August 4 in Pardubice, the Slovenian team Lisicke proved that the previous night's win over the Chromies in the 1 v 2 Page Playoff game was no fluke by doing it again.

This was a tense, close and extremely well-played final, and Lisicke prevailed 6-4 after the Chromies ran themselves out of a rally in the bottom of the seventh inning with the tying runs on base.

The game could not have been more even. Both teams had 12 hits, the Chromies committed only one error and Lisicke two and both received superb performances from their pitchers -- David Lee for the Chromies and Ales Mravlje for Lisicke. But for once, it wasn't the British that won on power. GB's all-time power hitter Brett Gibbens, to be sure, had a home run in the game -- his ninth in the competition. It was a solo shot in the first inning and gave the Chromies a 1-0 lead. But Lisicke's Ales Mravlje had two blasts over the left field fence in the third and fifth innings, driving in five of the Slovenians' six runs, and those home runs were the difference.

The Slovenian team, as winners often do, had three crucial pieces of luck in the game, including one of their errors that turned out to work in their favour. But no one can begrudge them a wonderful triumph. The Slovenians lost only once in the eight-team competition, and their blend of base-hitting, speed, power and thoughtful pitching is slowpitch at its best, as befits the only Central European country without a fastpitch programme.

„I don't have any complaints,“ Chromies Co-Manager Doug Clouston said after the game. „They played great softball, and they were younger, faster and fitter than we were. It was a wonderful tournament, and if anyone disparages the European Cup back home after the week we've had here, I'll just laugh at them.

„But I think we have some major rebuilding to do,“ Doug added. Slovenia as a country is currently ranked second in the European slowpitch table, and now they are ranked first in European club slowpitch. It is a remarkable achievement for a tiny country that came to the 2008 European Championships in Southampton and finished last.

The Final

Having lost on Friday afternoon to Lisicke in the 1 v 2 Page Playoff game, Chromies had to overcome dangerous opponents Saturday morning in the German Team UCE Travellers to get back to the final. That was a tight game as well, with the Chromies prevailing 11-8.

But there was a special atmosphere about the final even before the game began, and it had to do with the fact that no one could confidently predict the outcome. The game the two teams had played the previous afternoon had gone into the seventh inning tied at 9-9. What would happen today?

Having lost the 1 v 2 game, Chromies were the visitors in the final, and the aim was to jump out on top quickly. They did -- on Brett Gibbens' solo blast in the top of the first -- but a 1-0 lead didn't feel like much of a cushion.

Lisicke came back in the bottom of the first with two hits, but a double play started by Moe Flett at third base kept them off the board. An even better play kept the Slovenians scoreless in the bottom of the second when Eric Kelly made a tremendous throw to the plate from right-centre field to nail the lightning-quick Ziga Strvicelj trying to score on a single by Ziga Bauer.

In the top of the third, the Chromies increased the lead to 2-0. Eric Kelly led off the inning with a triple to the fence in left field and scored on Michael O'Sullivan's groundout to first.

Clearly, this was going to be a game of pitching and defence -- but 2-0 was never going to be good enough, and Lisicke erased the lead in the bottom of the third with the benefit of their first break in the game. There were two on and two outs when Savina Golicnik hit a sharp ground ball back to David Lee. On another day, David might have snared it, but this time it bounded off his glove, a run scored, and instead of the inning being over, Ales Mravlje was coming to the plate. One long home run later and Lisicke led 4-2.

A double play cut down a Chromies' rally in the top of the fourth, but the British team shaved the lead to 4-3 in the top of the fifth. David Lee singled to left, went to second when the ball was misplayed and scored on a double by Eric Kelly.

The Slovenians scored their last two crucial runs in the bottom of the fifth, but there were two out and no one on when they did it. Savina Golicnik drove a 1-1 pitch over the head of Brett Gibbens in left, and that brought Ales Mravlje to the plate. Brett could only wave his arms in despair as the ball soared over his head and over the fence for a 6-3 Slovenian lead.

The final two innings were a tale of GB trying to find a way to catch up, and being thwarted by the Slovenian defence and two pieces of bad luck.

In the top of the sixth, Brett Gibbens and Misha Sulcova singled with one out. Danny Gunn then smashed the ball back at pitcher Ales Mravlje. The ball cannoned off his arm and up in the air -- but straight to second base player Grega Vacancic standing near the bag, and the result was an inning-ending and very fortuitous double play.

So to the top of the seventh, with the Slovenians still leading 6-3. Could the Chromies find a comeback?

Moe Flett opened with a fly ball to Ziga Bauer, but the unflappable David Lee lined a single up the middle, Jenny Ball dropped a single into left and Eric Kelly lined a single to left, scoring David and cutting the lead to 6-4, with Jenny on second and Eric on first.

Up came Natalie Bailey, pinch-hitting for Vicky McKendrick, and Natalie hit a line drive to shortstop Andraz Skabar. Andraz caught the ball for the second out and fired to first in an attempt to pick off Eric Kelly. The throw skipped past the first base player, Tina Trobec, and Jenny Ball scampered to third and was waved on home. But the ball had rebounded back to Trobec, who fired a strike to the plate and Jenny was tagged out by catcher Gabi Hu-merca despite a headfirst slide.

It was a stunning ending. Suddenly, the game was over and the Slo-venians were European Cup champions. And no one could deny that they deserved it.

The best yet

Players, umpires and ESF officials who were in Pardubice are all agreed that this year's competition has been the best European Slowpitch Cup yet.

That's not just because the competition has enjoyed its highest number of entries (eight), but because of the quality of the softball played and the closeness of the competition, with seven of the eight teams capable of beating the others.

More importantly, the techniques and tactics of slowpitch are now much more widespread in Europe. It's no longer a case of Euro-pean baseball and fastpitch players trying to adapt to the slowpitch game -- the teams here this week are playing proper slowpitch, and some of them are playing it very well indeed.

A proposal has been sitting on the desk of the ESF Executive for over a year now to make the European Slowpitch Cup a biennial event, alternating with the European Slowpitch Championships.

The theory is that having just one European slowpitch event per year (instead of two in European Championship years) will en-courage more countries/teams to enter. It remains to be seen whether the ESF will bring this about, and what the response will be, but opinion in Pardubice seemed to favour the proposal. All the teams here want their experience this week to be repeated (the 2010 European Slowpitch Championships in Prague were very similar), and having one slowpitch event per year amidst a full baseball and fastpitch calendar in Europe may be the way to go.

But the main lesson coming out of this week, foreshadowed in the European Slowpitch Championships last year in Dupnitsa, is that the days of automatic British (or occasionally Irish) victories are over.

When Japan beat the USA to win the last Olympic Championship in Beijing in 2008, the universal opinion (apart, of course, from Team USA and the ASA) was that the result was good for soft-ball -- albeit maybe four years too late to keep the sport in the Olympics. In Pardubice, the universal opinion (shared by many of the Chromies), is that the win by Lisicke is a very good thing for slowpitch softball in Europe.

If the Slovenians could beat one of the best teams in England, then other countries and slowpitch club teams will be thinking that they have a chance to do so as well. And eventually, they will.

A win for the Tigers

In their very last game of the tournament -- the seventh place playoff game with the Askoe Linz Bandits from Austria -- the Sun-ville Tigers from Belgium finally won a game. They took an early lead, went into the bottom of the seventh 8-5 ahead, and just held out as the Bandits scored two and had the tying run on third and the winning run on second when the final out was made.

The crowd -- and there were decent crowds all week -- gave the Belgians a warm hand.

But it was a particularly disappointing result for the Austrians, who opened the tournament with three wins in their first four games, including the only pool defeat of Lisicke, then didn't win a game thereafter. In the very last pool game on Friday, had the Austrians defeated the Dodder Dynamoers, they would have made the play-offs. But after trailing 8-0 and coming back to 8-8, the Austrians lost 9-8 and now they have finished the tournament in last place.

As for Dodder Dynamoers, they lost the fifth place playoff game on Saturday to the Czech team DNace by a score of 17-10 and played poorly in doing so. Irish softball has some rebuilding to do, perhaps more urgently than the Chromies.

Final Standings

- 1 -- Chromies (GB)
- 2 -- Lisicke (Slovenia)

- 4 -- Pasos Pardubice (Czech Republic)

This is 9th gold in the club's history following the titles in 95, 98, 99, 2000, 2001, 2008, 2009, 2010.

The Akademiks won the finals in a 2:0 victory with scores of 8:7 and 4:3 against the team of Babes Blagoevgrad.
